

KINGSTON NATIONAL ABORIGINAL DAY FESTIVAL COMMITTEE PRESENTS:

CULTURAL SENSITIVITY TRAINING

This exciting & engaging workshop invites professional Aboriginal & Non-Aboriginal service providers who work with Aboriginal peoples, agencies and community organizations.

This culturally sensitivity training will offer a deeper understanding into the, "Intergenerational Trauma" due to colonization, residential schools and other historical traumas.

This workshop will provide frontline workers/service providers with the tools & knowledge to assist in their relationship building with Aboriginal clients, agencies as well as community organizations to further help break down the barriers of stereotypes, myths & misconceptions experienced by Aboriginal Peoples.

Attendees will leave this workshop, empowered with the knowledge & training which is integral for a positive environment & working relationship with your respective clients.

YOU CAN BE THE CHANGE!

Cheryle Jacobs is of the Ojibway/Cree descent & is from Sagamok Anishnawbek First Nations located on the North Shore of Lake Huron. Cheryle comes with a wealth of knowledge & experience. The traditional teachings and knowledge that she carries has helped her overcome Intergenerational impacts of residential school in her family and start her healing journey.
